ESG Services in Australia with the power of a global network

Realising the importance of ESG is vital to the success of any organisation. It is no longer just metrics and financial strategies, but also the ESG aspects that are important to the health, longevity and sustainability of your organisation.

ESG for organisations comes in two parts and each should be considered as a separate critical element. Firstly organisations should embed sound ESG strategy and practices in the running of their operations. Our research has shown that organisations who embed ESG authentically into their operations stand to win considerably.

Secondly, reliable and robust ESG reporting can provide assurance to key stakeholders of any organisation, be that shareholders, customers, clients or suppliers. As greenwashing becomes more of a concern than ever, how an organisation reports on ESG metrics and green credentials can significantly influence key business outcomes.

The International Reporting Sustainability Standards Board (ISSB) has finalised the the first two global Sustainability Reporting standards and the AASB is expected to have the final standards adjusted to Australian context in the first half of 2024.

Although there are still a number of years before the reporting standards become mandatory for many organisations in Australia, some smaller entities may be required to prepare disclosures ahead of the mandatory application dates to meet demands from large customers, suppliers, and financiers.

It is important that your organisation starts the assessment process early, to ensure you don't fall behind or lose out on critical opportunities.

Moore Australia teams are here to support you in meeting the new and changing sustainability standards.
